INTERESTING SESSION OF THE CITY COUNCIL HELD MONDAY NIGHT

The City Council met Monday evening for the first regular session since the recent election, an interesting meeting being held, with all members present, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

A communication was received from Company No. 3, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, endorsing the city zoning ordinance, and urging that the City Council enforce the provisions of the ordinance by denying the establishment of business places in the residential districts.

A petition from twelve residents of the Citrus avenue and Miriam street district, asking for a street light, was referred to the lighting committee.

A request from Goldie's Tire Shop for permission to use a gasoline buggy in front of that place of business was referred to the fire chief, to report at the next meeting of the Council.

A request from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for permission to lay a gas main along several streets in Daly City was granted, subject to approval of the city engineer. As this main is necessary for better service, and only unpaved streets are to be used, the Council took favorable action on this matter.

The lighting committee moved to ask the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for a complete map of all lights and candle power of each, this being considered necessary to check the system.

The committee on the widening of San Jose avenue reported having held a meeting with a representative of San Francisco, and will be able to submit maps and plans of the proposed work within the near future.

A petition for permission to erect a grocery and fruit store by Mr. B. R. Cashion, at 357 Westlake avenue, was discussed. The location being in the residential district that is zoned by a city ordinance, the Council denied the request, stating that in planning for the future growth of Daly City, it was deemed wise to restrict all business of this nature in such districts.

A request from Goldie's Tire Shop to reserve a parking place in which to repair tires was denied by the Council, on the ground of this being public property, and that many other merchants would expect the same privilege.

The ordinance committee and police chief were instructed to study the placing of stop signs on Templeton avenue at several crossings. This steet being used more than any other in the upper side of our city, it was thought by the City Council that many accidents may be avoided if this matter was given some thought.

After all bills and salaries for the month of April were read and ordered paid, the Council adjourned to meet again May 14.

SCHOOL PRINCIPAL TO TALK IN CHURCH

We take great pleasure in making this special announcement for the Sunday evening service at the Daly City Methodist church.

Mr. James Ferguson, principal of Jefferson Union high school, will speak, at the request of the pastor, upon a vital subject to every loyal citizen of Daly City, "The Mission of the Public Schools."

It will be a most fitting climax to the observance of Education Week, and everyone is urged to attend and bring their friends.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock the pastor will speak upon the subject "The Cure for Worry." We are sure that you will enjoy the morning hour of worship. Come and bring your friends.

The Ladies Aid Society will hold a food sale Saturday, April 28, at the store once occupied by Milo's Market, on the corner of Hillcrest Drive and Mission street, next door to the Daly City Pharmacy. The proceeds from this sale will go toward the proposed basketball court. We need your help. Please do your bit.

Friday, May 4, the Ladies Aid Society will present a musical, under the direction of Mrs. C. M. Warner, assisted by radio artists. Mr. Douglas Lynch of KFWI, the Belsar Sisters trio of KFRC, Mrs. Norma Raymond, Miss Florence Petersen, Miss Esther Warber, of San Francisco, and Prof. T. Eugene Goudey will be among the group of entertainers.

Driver Backs Into Building

The driver of an automobile caused some excitement at J. Hontalas' candy shop last Wednesday evening when he backed his machine into the front of the building, badly injuring one of the pilars. The driver started his machine in reverse and before he could stop had crashed into the store building.

HOOVER CLUB FORMED BY DALY CITY VOTERS

A number of the voters of Daly City met last Tuesday evening and formally organized a Hoover for President Club.

The objects of the new organization are to secure a membership that will assist in getting the voters of this section to go to the polls at the primary election on Tuesday, May 1. They hope by this means to give Herbert Hoover a testimonial of the appreciation of California by voting for him for president of the United States.

The members of the Hoover for President Club believe the people of California should show their appreciation of Secretary Hoover's labors for the people of the state and the nation by giving him the largest vote at the May 1 primaries ever accorded a "favorite son" candidate.

The officers chosen for the Hoover for President Club are A. L. Stockton, president; Mrs. Grace L. Augustien, first vice-president; J. E. A. Miller, second vice-president; George Henry, third vice-president; L. W. John, secretary-treasurer.

Games were enjoyed until midnight, when the guests were ushered into the dining room, where dainty refreshments were served.

JOURNEY TO PESCADERO ON SEARCH FOR ABALONE

A group of Daly City friends left their homes at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning and motored to Pescadero, to be in time for the high tide, for abalone. After getting the limit, they picnicked at the beach for the rest of the day, all reporting having had a wonderful time. The jolly group was composed of the following: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. G. Lagomarsino and son George, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Foss and son Ernest, Mr. and Mrs. H. Lorenz and children, Helen Alice and Henry, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rickman and daughter Frances, Miss E. Durbin, Messrs. T. Wickersham, C. Page, J. Washburn, M. Reasoner, R. Mullin, M. Johnson, R. Johnson and C. Heller.

SANTA CRUZ COUNTY UNABLE TO MEET ITS QUOTA FOR HIGHWAY

Santa Cruz county can not participate in the building of the $5,300,000 San Francisco-Santa Cruz highway, following the ocean shore through San Mateo county, unless the southern county's quota of the cost of the road is cut from 20 per cent to 15 per cent.

This was the final result of a conference held with the Santa Cruz county supervisors last Monday at Santa Cruz by Supervisor John W. Poole of Redwood City, County Engineer George A. Kneese and Senator M. B. Johnson of Montara, representing San Mateo county in the road project.

The three San Mateo county representatives later conferred with San Francisco officials in the hope that the county to the north will bear a larger share than 50 per cent of the cost, as already approved by the tri-county district board, charged with completing plans for the highway. The board's original recommendation apportioned 50 per cent to San Francisco, 30 per cent to San Mateo county and 20 per cent to Santa Cruz county.

Definite decision as to increasing the San Francisco quota is a matter which must be decided by the district board and given approval of San Francisco supervisors, it was stated at San Francisco.

Supervisors of Santa Cruz county had already filed objection to paying 20 per cent of the cost of the road, but was induced to give reconsideration last Monday in the hope that they might find adequate financing for the highway, declared to be of vital importance to the coast district of San Mateo county. An already heavy bonded indebtedness was pleaded as the principal reason why Santa Cruz county can not assume the 20 per cent quota, amounting to $1,060,000.

San Mateo county can not assume the 5 per cent which Santa Cruz county officials declare they are unable to meet, and aid must be forthcoming from San Francisco if the road is to be built, it was pointed out by the San Mateo county representatives.

Celebrates Eleventh Birthday

Eugene Nation was guest of honor at a birthday party last Saturday afternoon at the home of his mother, Mrs. E. W. Nation, of 167 Peoria street, the occasion being the celebration of his eleventh birthday. The afternoon was spent playing games, after which dainty refreshments were served to the following guests: Helen McQueen, Julia Nation, Genevieve McQueen, Jessie Augustien, Helen Nation, Dorothy Ross, Alice Ross, Verna Rose Nation, Arthur Taylor, Charles Augustien, Leonard Stuler Jack Chesterman and Albert Chesterman.

NEW LEADERS CHOSEN BY P. T. A. MEMBERS AT ANNUAL MEETING

The first district convention of the San Mateo County Parent-Teachers' Association was held in the San Mateo Junior College, in San Mateo, Thursday and Friday of last week.

The San Mateo County Parent-Teachers' Association now boasts of a total enrollment of 1,568 members. A total of $10,000 was taken in by the various associations during the past year. A total of $7,586 was spent for different branches of the work, and $416 was expended for play ground equipment.

When the time came for the selection of new officers, Miss Victoria Roussel, of Belmont, was chosen as president. Mrs. A. A. Garland, of Menlo Park, Mrs. Mae Lipman, of Burlingame, Mrs. E. W. Cleary, of Burlingame, Mrs. A. E. Burton, of San Mateo, Mrs. Edward Corlett, of San Bruno, and Mrs. Davidson were elected vice-presidents; Mrs. W. A. Wood, of Burlingame, recording secretary; Mrs. Nellie Higgs, of Belmont, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. E. Baughn, of Redwood City, financial secretary; Mrs. Herbert Gibson, of San Mateo, treasurer; Mrs. W. L. Cook, of San Bruno, auditor; Mrs. Mary Leith, of San Mateo, historian; and Mrs. Earl Steinbeck, of Burlingame, parliamentarian.

On Thursday evening a delightful program was given in the Roosevelt high school in Burlingame by the Parent-Teachers' Association. Several musical numbers were rendered by the wonderful students' band of that school, and the Glee Club of San Mateo Juinor College sang several numbers, after which Mrs. Owens, president of the Seventeenth district, introduced Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, superintendent of schools of San Mateo county, who after a few remarks introduced Governor C. C. Young, who was the speaker of the evening, and who delivered a most interesting and instructive address.

Daly City was well represented, both in the day-time and evening sessions, by members of the Crocker-Pershing and the Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Associations.

Attacks Ordinance in County Court

Alleging that the city of San Mateo is violating provisions of the state constitution which guarantees the freedom of the press, the San Francisco Shopping News, a publication devoted to advertising, has attacked a recent ordinance of that city which prohibits the throwing of hand bills and other unsolicited papers upon the property of San Mateo householders. A temporary injunction is asked in a complaint filed in the Superior Court at Redwood City to prevent enforcement of the ordinance.

DISCUSS WIDENING OF SAN JOSE AND MISSION

A meeting was held last Tuesday by representatives from San Francisco, Daly City and San Mateo county to discuss plans for widening San Jose avenue from Ocean View to Mission street, and the widening of Mission street from the top of the hill to Colma.

The following took part in this conference: Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher and Supervisor Fred Suhr, of the street committee of San Francisco; Colonel John H. Skeggs, engineer of California State Highway Commission; Clyde Healy, assistant engineer of San Francisco; George A. Kneese, county surveyor and city engineer of Daly City; Robert A. Klassen, assistant engineer of Daly City; and Mayor H. H. Smith.

The necessity and urgency of this move was readily realized, especially by the delegation from San Francisco and the San Francisco engineer was instructed to work with the Daly City engineer and prepare plans and estimates of cost, etc., at the earliest convenience.

This seems to be one of the most important movements in highway improvement to take care of the ever increasing traffic from San Francisco down the peninsula, and it is surely good news to the people of this section to learn that this matter of widening San Jose avenue and Mission street will be taken up immediately and in all likelihood pushed to a successful conclusion in the near future.

ST. MAXIMUS PARISH NOTES

On next Tuesday evening, May 1, St. Maximus parish will resume the whist parties which have been such an attraction in the past. This is the first of a series of post-Lenten games which the ladies of the parish will conduct on the first Tuesday of each month in the Daly City Auditorium. Dancing will follow the whist game.

Last Tuesday evening a special meeting of the parishioners was held in the parish hall to discuss ways and means to provide the children with an athletic field. Plans have been adopted which call for basketball, handball and tennis courts, with dressing rooms and showers. The expense for this will be rather heavy, but a little co-operation on the part of the members of the parish will provide the boys with suitable means of recreation. The boys are forming divisions of the St. Maximus Boys' Club in Seniors, Juniors and Midgets. Capable coaches have already been secured and we look to hearing of the fame of the St. Maximus Boys' Club in the near future.

ENTERTAINING TALK IN OBSERVANCE OF EDUCATIONAL WEEK

Members and friends of Crocker Lodge No. 454, F. & A. M., and Crocker Lodge Order of De Molay, were guests of the Daly City Methodist church last Sunday evening, the occasion being the annual observance of Education Week.

Mr. William Crocket, chairman of the Masonic educational committee or the state of California, was present and spoke upon the reasons for Education Week and Masonry's part in its observance. He urged all of the parents to attend school during this week and see for themselves the progress that the public schools are making, saying that Education Week, although sponsored by Masonry, was not entirely a Masonic occasion, but has now become a public affair, and urged all citizens to take part in its observance.

The pastor then introduced Mr. J. E. Jones, of the English department of Jefferson Union high school. Mr. Jones spoke upon the subject "Progress in Education," saying: "There have been changes in education during the past two hundred years of our history, which for the most part have meant progress. The emphasis in teaching has shifted from the subjects of the curriculum to the special needs of the boys and girls who have come for training.

"Changes have come in three phases of educational endeaver. In the first place, the curriculum has shifted from the purely classical and biblical content of the days of our New England history, to an enrichment, which includes courses in vocational endeavor beyond the dreams of our forefathers. Compulsory education, in addition to the increasing complexity of our industrial life, has made such a comprehensive extension of the curriculum necessary. Training for college is not now the major aim of high school training. The college course is not placed above the commercial, the mechanical arts, or home economics.

"In the second place, a reorganization of the system to take into account the specific needs of certain ages has come about. In all up-to-date systems the grammar school includes now only the first six grades. Above that is the Junior high school for the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, the Senior high school including the tenth, eleventh and twelfth, and in the larger centers, the Junior College, which comprises the first two years of the University. This reorganization groups students according to their physiological and mental ages, and has proved to be a great advance in bringing more efficient training to our youth.

"In the third place, there has been marked progress in methods of diagnosing the needs of boys and girls. Scientific tests and measurements are bringing a more accurate check on what pupils are capable of doing, and are making possible their grouping into homogeneous groups. This grouping has meant more for efficiency than any other one thing.

"Educational leaders are persistently studying the problems of our educational work, and are conscientiously endeavoring to make possible a training for every person according to his ability and life needs."

The pastor then closed the service by urging all the citizens of the community to support the public schools, and called to their attention the fact that the special school tax election had recently been lost by a small vote. The special school tax is badly needed, and he called upon every citizen to support the high school by voting for the special tax at the next election.

Next Sunday evening Mr. James Ferguson, principal of Jefferson Union high school, will speak on "The Mission of the Public Schools." This will indeed be a fitting climax to Educational Week.

TROUT FISHING SEASON WILL OPEN MAY 1

The great day is fast approaching when California's great army of anglers will seek to snare a limit of the elusive trout in the far flung waters of the state. Right now most of the fishermen have their own ideas about where they will fish. However the Division of Fish and Game of the department of natural resources has made an exhaustive investigation of fishing conditions, by securing reports from members of its field force.

Anglers should feel encouraged, as the reports indicate that many a fisherman will get his limit on May 1st. The division warns all that a license must first be secured and the limit of trout is twenty-five, or ten pounds and one fish. Cooperation with the field forces will help the conservation program of the division, it will help the anglers, and be highly conducive to the successful opening of the season.

Pays Tribute to Daly City's Efficient Police Force

The above is a fairly good photograph of the members of the Daly City police force. We wouldn't go so far as to say that the picture flatters the officers, who appear to be standing in front of the bars, but it is a pretty good likeness of the members of our police department, which recently appeared in "2-O" Police Journal of San Francisco.

Accompanying this photograph was a tribute written by Jack Lawlor, former police reporter of the Daily News, in which he says:

"Having knocked about the country for ten years meeting country constables, sheriffs and policemen of all varieties whether I wanted to or not, and as a former police reporter and newspaper man, I think I can speak from first hand about 'who's who' among policemen. In fact, I have worked among them so much and have so many friends among them that I can appraise their worth almost at a glance. Recently it has been my good fortune to meet one of California's typical chiefs, Jack Doyle of Daly City. His name is John, but nobody calls him that and he is Jack to all the men, women and children of the fast growing city of which he has the honor to be head of the police department.

"It is conceded by everyone that Daly City is one of the best policed communities in the West. There is less crime there than in any city of equal size and its streets are free from bums and tramps.

"Women and children of Daly City know that they can traverse its streets at any hour without fear because of Chief Jack Doyle and his efficient little force. Another thing, Jack has made Daly City a place to be respected and it no longer is the butt and sally of vaudeville performers—thanks to Jack. He is not only an able chief of police, but he finds time occassionally to gratify his keen interest in all sports and is known as one of California's crack shots with rifle and revolver. He is a native son and a pioneer of San Mateo county.

"The officers associated with him as members of the department are Sergeant Arthur L. Hilton, Officer Otto A. Schramm and Officer William Hopman."

EIGHTY LOSE LICENSE RESULT OF DRINKING

Net results of the Division of Motor vehicles' drive against intoxicated drivers for the first three months of 1928, just made public, shows eighty persons lost their licenses for this offence during the period.

Declaring that there will be no let up in the campaign until this evil has been permantely abated, Frank G. Snook, chief of the division, urged the traffic officers to redouble their efforts to drive this criminal from the highways.

"Take no chances with any person who obviously has been drinking heavily," he said, "and under no circumstances should such person be allowed to proceed with their car under such a condition.

"The intoxicated driver is the most dangerous person on the highways today."

The extent of the evil was shown by Snook in the figures showing that the revocations for the three months period for driving while intoxicated comprises more than half of the revocations for all offences, the grand total being 148.

Of the forty-nine persons who lost their right to drive for one year during March, thirty-one were charged with driving while drunk.

Angel food cakes! easy to make

When grandmother made angel food cakes the recipes of her day were inaccurate. It took years to know her oven.

But today, when you accurately measure and mix ingredients, you believe your cakes should always be good.

They will be, unless you're guessing at the oven temperature which is the chief cause of rubbery angel food cakes. They must be baked at 325 degrees.

All the modern gas ranges have the Oven Temperature Control. It keeps the oven at exactly the temperature for which it is set. You place the angal food cake in the oven, set the Control for 325 degrees and leave the kitchen for an hour. The monotony of watching the baking vanishes. Meats, pies, and even a whole meal can also be baked with the same ease and freedom.

See the modern gas ranges with the Oven Temperature Control.

DECREASE IN MOTOR INJURIES TO CHILDREN

A sharp decrease in the number of motor accidents to children in the vicinity of school houses in the rural districts of California, resulting from the junior traffic reserve system established a few months ago, has been reported by the Division of Motor Vehicles.

While complete figures on accidents for the first three months of the year are still unavailable, division officials said early returns indicated that the toll in killed and injured over last year had been reduced more than one-third. The junior traffic patrol and the rigid enforcement by traffic officers of the law prohibiting driving past schoolhouses at a speed in excess of fifteen miles an hour were held responsible.

The organization of the patrols has been conducted by the state inspectors and traffic officers in co-operation with California State Automobile Association. So successful has the experiment become that Frank G. Snook, chief of the division, is planning to organize the patrols in every county in California.

The boys that work on the squad are, in effect, junior traffic officers since they are clothed with authority to report violations of the law. In case a motorist disobeys a signal the junior officer takes his number and reports it to the police authorities. The recalcitrant motorist is thereafter given his choice of apologizing to the boy-officer in front of his class or telling it to the judge.

OUT OF SEASON HUNT BRINGS FINE OF $250

Two spike bucks killed back of Morgan Hill cost Alan Balanesi $250, in the court of Judge Moore of San Jose, and Balanesi lost the deer besides. This all came about when Deputy Joe Schneider of Morgan Hill, arrested the out of season hunter and haled him into court. The judge scored him severely and assessed the fine mentioned above.

"Great work, our game will be respected only when more such fines are imposed upon such wilful violators," I. Zellerbach. President of the Fish and Game Commission, declared upon reading Holladay's report of the case.

ANNUAL MOUNTAIN PLAY TO BE HELD ON MAY 20

An original play, written especially for presentation in the mountain theatre, will be the vehicle for the Mountain Play Association in its fifteenth annual production in the Tamalpais mountain playhouse, which has become famous as one of the "blue dome" theatres of California. The plays are given each year on the third Sunday in May, which falls this year on May 20.

The play chosen this year is "Flamenca," a story of Gypsy romance, which will provide the color and pageantry necessary for effective presentation in the natural amphitheatre above the clouds. No artificial aids are used on this stage of soft green grass, with only clumps of trees and shrubs for "wings," and the sweep of the mountain side and the deep blue of the sea and sky for a backdrop.

PUNISH THE ARSONIST

Arson is often called the "crime of crimes," and there is good justification for such a title. It is responsible for more than 50 per cent of the lives of firemen lost in all fires. One arson fire is said to cost more than a dozen accidental fires.

Many fire where arson cannot be proved and which are listed in the "unknown" or "miscellaneous" column, are caused by arson. It is estimated that 20 per cent of all fires are incendiary.

Arson is a crime commited against society, not just against insurance companies. Arson is committed by the lowest type of criminal, one who does not hesitate to endanger the lives of innocent people.

Arson is being combated by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, working with leading states and cities. A model arson law is being urged in various states. Many suspicious fires today are being investigated by arson detectives and increased convictions are resulting. No leniency should be shown the arsonist.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

City and county school superintendents of California will meet at Del Monte October 1 to 6, according to word received from William John Cooper, State superintendent of public instruction.

The international council for educational progress is to be made a permanent organization. This was decided at a meeting of California educators gathered at Will C. Wood's office recently. Formed originally to entertain a delegation of visiting Mexican educators late this month, the organization may be extended to create an educational entente between this country and Mexico, in the opinion of Dr. C. N. Thomas, organizer of the movement.

In the comparatively short space of twenty-one years, California has reduced her infant mortality rate by 62 per cent. From a rate of 160 deaths for every 1,000 births in 1906, the rate has decreased with fair consistency to 62 per 1,000 last year—a new low record. Figures announced a few days ago by the State department of public health show that California has one of the lowest infant mortality rates in the entire United States, being ten deaths per thousand below the average for the entire United States.

The proposed $6,000,000 State Park bond issue to be used in acquiring park lands over the State and thereby reserving to future generations great natural beauties last week received the unanimous indorsement of a committee of the directors of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce. The action followed a special meeting at which Fred G. Stevenot, director of the State department of natural resources, and William E. Colby, chairman of the State park commission, stressed features of the project under which half of the purchase price of each park project must be raised from sources other than the State.

The Covered Wagon Babies' Club, whose membership comprises Californians who came to this State in the historic covered wagons of early days, will hold a meeting in Sacramento on September 9th. Word to this effect was received last week by L. W. Hayes, manager of the Sacramento Tourist and Convention Bureau, from Superior Judge J. C. Needham of Modesto, Stanislaus county, an officer of the club.

Calling upon the citizenry of California to observe American Forestry Week, April 22nd to 28th, Governor C. C. Young in a statement issued today, declared that the forests of the state are the bulwark against two major misfortunes—Winter floods and Summer aridity. "In California," said the Governor, "our entire water supply comes from the watersheds in our hills and mountains. If these are densely covered with brush or trees, much of the water of our Winter storms sinks into the ground and is conserved for Summer irrigation. But if that brush and forest is destroyed, nearly all of the water rushes directly into the streams, producing destructive floods in Winter, followed by shortage of water in the Summer when it is badly needed."

Two giant air beacons in widely separated portions of California flashed forth for the first time a few nights ago when Col. Charles Lindbergh pressed a telegraph key in Denver, Colo. One is situated at Mount Diablo and the other in the Merced Hills near Los Angeles. Lindbergh reached Lowry Field, Denver, in the afternoon in his monoplane from Grand Canyon, Ariz. The beacons were installed by the Standard Oil Company under the advice and supervision of the United States department of commerce. They are part of the marking of a network of national airways now in the process of delineation by the department.

California's lead in ownership of automobiles is apparently to be repeated with respect to airplanes, this State now ranking first in the nation in the number of aircraft given official recognition by the United States government. California's enthusiastic adoption of this mode of locomotion for all general business and pleasure purposes was enlarged upon in a review of Federal government figures released by the North American Bond and Mortgage Company of Los Angeles. According to this survey the State of New York is a poor second in the matter of flying. The survey report discloses that California has sixty-eight licensed machines, 134 identified and 254 numbered, as compared with New York's 118, 72 and 78, respectively. Next on the list comes Texas and then Illinois and Michigan. Two States, Vermont and New Hampshire, have only two commercial planes in use.

Eat in All Languages

In Shanghai they have an international restaurant, according to Capper's Weekly. "The proprietor," says Capper's "is a Japanese, the waiters Chinese, the cook a Portuguese, the 'bouncer' a Scandinavian, the doorman a husky Russian, and the restaurant's customers are American French, English, Spanish and Italian service men. No monotony of diet there."

All mankind likes a kind man.

DIDN'T MIND WAR, CAN'T ABIDE RADIO

Blare of Neighbor's Loud Speaker Gets His Goat.

Montreal Quebec.—In the flame and smoke of the battle, when shot and shell fell all around, when clouds of gas swept from the German lines over "No Man's Land," Joseph Pierre of Canada's famous Twenty-second battalion flinched not at all.

In proof of this he bears proudly on his chest the ribbons of the French Croix Militaire and the Italian Military Cross and the D. C. M., as well as the ordinary war medals.

But times have changed. The man who slept through bombardments and barrages draws a line at radio.

It was this dislike that brought him into the dock before Judge Marin recently, charged with breaking a neighbor's window.

"I can stand anything," he told the court, excitedly, "but I can't stand that everlasting radio. I was gassed in the war, you know, and it has affected me a bit."

The judge learned that Pierre had been forced to listen to the blare of a neighbor's radio until he marched to the neighbor's front door to protest.

Evidently the noise drowned the sound of his knocking. There was no reply. Infuriated, Pierre defeated the radio by putting his fist through a window.

The judge was sympathetic. "But you mustn't smash windows like that. If you do not like the radio you must move. Meanwhile you will have to pay for the window and the costs of the case."

Three Saved From Sea, Using Shirt as Signal

Philadelphia.—Three men who had been swept out to sea off the Florida coast and rescued when the attention of a passing steamer was attracted by the use of a shirt as a signal of distress, were brought to this port.

The rescued men, Carl D. Purser, Harold Forbes and Joseph Danes, all of West Palm Beach, were picked up by the United Fruit company's steamer Anderson, bound from Porto Castilla to Philadelphia. Forbes and Danes are negroes.

The trio started for bluefish one morning in a motor boat. Several miles out their engine went dead and, having no oars, they were carried out to sea by the heavy tide. They took turns in the afternoon and night on lookout duty for passing ships, but none was sighted.

Their food and water had run out and they were beginning to feel the pangs of hunger and thirst when Purser decided to use his shirt as a distress signal. A few hours later the three were sighted by the Anderson.

Sisters Starve to Death to Save Gold

Lancaster, Pa.—Two spinster sisters, whose existence in a dilapidated old home near here has occasioned stories of mysteriously accumulated wealth, are dead from starvation.

Miss Catherine Metzger, seventy years old, was found dead in the barnyard of the old estate at Bridgeport, just east of this city. Miss Harriet Metzger, sixty-four, succumbed at a Lancaster hospital. County authorities, after an investigation, said the deaths were due to starvation and exposure.

The women entered a self-imposed exile away from their relatives in the old family homestead, and in their desire to save gold, denied themselves all luxuries and many necessities of life.

Whether the old house contains the life hoardings of the two remains a matter for conjecture, as the doors were locked and admittance was denied those who sought entrance.

Spends 36 Years Paying Off Debts of Brother

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—Thirty-six years ago, when her brother failed in business and left debts totaling $6,000, Miss Mary Shaw of Maquoketa prayed to live long enough to pay them. She wiped the slate clean a short time ago, and then died at the age of eighty years.

Miss Shaw gave every penny she could afford from her income toward paying off the indebtedness, and never bought a new dress in all those years, her friends say.

Several months ago she was operated on for appendicitis, an operation she withstood without an anesthetic. When told she might not recover, she informed her physician she was ready to go because she had fulfilled her life mission.

Watches Own Heart as Surgeons Operate

Santa Rosa, Calif.—L. H. Nobles, Sonoma county farmer, watched in a mirror the reflection of his own heartbeats while physicians were performing a delicate operation on him.

The operation was for removal of pus sacs formed near the heart after a severe attack of influenza. Surgeons removed a section of three ribs, using a local anesthetic and opened the pus sacs.

Nobles talked with the doctors during the operation and when he asked to see his heart beats, the nurse was ordered to hold mirrors so that he could see into his own chest. Hospital authorities expect him to recover.

SAVORY SANDWICHES

When dinner is served at night a substantial sandwich with a hot drink and a bit of fruit will make a sufficiently satisfying luncheon, especially good for the children coming in from school.

Pork Tenderloin Sandwich. — Have the tenderloins cut into one-inch slices and flattened well with a cleaver. Saute them in a little butter until well browned on both sides. Season well with salt and pepper. Cut bread into half-inch slices and spread with softened butter, then with chili sauce or catsup; place a hot, well-seasoned tenderloin on each slice of bread, cover with a second slice of bread, buttered and spread with chili sauce. Serve very hot.

Finnan Haddie Sandwiches.—Soak a small-sized haddock in cold water for half an hour, then in fresh water; cook 20 minutes. Drain and cool and pick the fish into small pieces. Add to it a seasoned white sauce and a few shreds of pimento. Pile high on slices of buttered toast, sprinkle with grated cheese and set into the oven to brown delicately. Serve with tart pickles.

Fish Omelet.—Flake a cupful of any cooked fish and add to it a cupful of medium white sauce. Chop fine one onion, one-half a green pepper, a stalk or two of celery or the white leaves; put two tablespoonfuls of butter in an omelet pan. Beat the yolks and whites of four eggs separately, add one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper to the yolks; fold in the stiffly beaten whites and pour all into the omelet pan. Brown lightly on the bottom, then set into a hot oven to dry off. Pour half the fish mixture over the omelet, then fold and pour over the remainder. Serve hot.

Corned Beef and Ham Sandwiches.—To a mixture of corn beef and ham finely chopped add a little sour pickle, also chopped. Spread on the buttered bread and heat hot in a very hot oven.

Hot Chicken Sandwiches.—These may be prepared nicely from left-over chicken: Chop the meat and for each cupful take one cupful of well-seasoned white sauce, slightly thicker than it is usually prepared. Add a tablespoonful of mayonnaise dressing to the white sauce, a teaspoonful of chopped capers and a teaspoonful of tarragon vinegar—less if desired. Spread slices of graham bread with butter, then with the prepared chicken and serve at once.

One may prepare shortcakes, deep pies or bird's nest puddings and various other delicious desserts with dried fruit.

The Golden Fruit.

Where oranges are found only in the markets, and not picked from the trees, many ways of serving them are untried. A most delicious shortcake, rivaling even the best of berries—the strawberry—is prepared from two or three oranges. Peel them removing all the white inner skin, and cut into small pieces, cover with sugar and let stand until the shortcake is ready. Butter the hot cake and pour over the oranges, juice and all; serve at once.

Orange Aspic.—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in a little cold water, dissolve in one cupful of boiling water, add one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one-half cupful of orange juice, a pinch of salt, a fourth cupful of finely chopped mint leaves. Heat just hot and add to the gelatin mixture. Strain and pour into a shallow pan. Set aside to chill. Cut into squares and serve with cold meat.

Orange Omelet.—Beat the yolks of four eggs until thick and light. To them add a few grains of salt, a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Mix well, fold in the stiffly beaten whites and pour into a well-buttered omelet pan. Cook over low heat until puffy and delicately brown on the bottom. Cover half the omelet with orange slices and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Fold, turn out on a platter and serve.

Orange Gravy.—Take two tablespoonfuls of sweet fat, three tablespoonfuls of flour, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of paprika, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt; cook together until smooth, add a tablespoonful of brown sugar and one-fourth teaspoonful of the grated rind. Add one cupful of orange juice and heat until smooth and thick, but do not boil as it will cause the orange juice to become bitter.

A dish of good apple sauce or a baked apple is an ideal breakfast fruit. Cook the well-washed apple cut into quarters and cored but not peeled. Add a bit of water and the sugar when they are nearly done. Chill and serve.

HIS MISTAKE

The telephone operator was spending a holiday by the sounding sea. On the first morning, however, she had occasion to rate the maid of the lodgings for real or imagined negligence.

"Why didn't you call me as I told you, this morning?" she demanded.

"I did, miss," reqlied the maid, with an injured air. "I called out 'Seven-thirty!' and all you ses was 'Line's busy!'"

Why?

A woman engaged a new maid, who seemed to be self-possessed and independent.

On the first morning after her arrival not a sound was heard in the house, so the mistress rang the bell. There was no reply. Finally she called up the stairs:

"Yes, rather," answered the maid. "Why?"

Brazilians Have Their Own Idea of Business

That the Brazilian takes his business, and life in general, in a natural, easy-going stride, is pointed out by Rudyard Kipling, famous English author and poet, in an article (copyright, 1928, by Rudyard Kipling in the U. S. A.) in Liberty Magazine.

"The Brazilian has been used to the English trader for generations," explains Kipling, "and he old experienced mercantile firms send out the type of Englishman most likely to be accepted. For the Brazilian has not yet reached the impersonality of ideal 'business.' If he likes you as an individual, he will do more than anything for you. If he doesn't, he will do less than nothing. If he knows little about you, but perceives that you have manners and a few trifles of that sort, he will wait and see. And he has heaps of leisure."

Pigeons which have infested St. Paul's cathedral in London are being caught by a mirror trap. More than 1,000 have already been captured by the method. The mirror is fitted in the back of the trap. ## WHO LIKES HIS JOB?

Several instances have come to notice recently which seem to discredit the old theory that in order to be a success one should follow a congenial line of work.

It is said that the late Joseph Conrad, the most famous of recent authors of sea stories, hated the sea and detested writing.

O. O. McIntyre tells of a leading and successful New York theatrical producer who has a deep antipathy to actors and actresses and despises the theatre; also of a man who has made a fortune as a florist, but who does not care for flowers and is nauseated by their perfume.

Now comes Irving S. Cobb, one of America's most famous writers and humorists, with the statement that he utterly dislikes writing, but keeps at it because he doesn't want to be a loafer, or words to that effect.

The average newspaper man will tell you that he loathes the eternal grind, but somehow you could not drive him out of it. Many musicians suffer mental torture when before audiences—and so it goes.

These may be the exception to the rule, but the lesson to be drawn from the instances noted is that determination to do good work will develop ability and bring success, whether one likes his job or not.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Thirty years ago this month events were moving rapidly toward that short but splendid struggle known to history as the Spanish-American war, which freed Cuba and the Philippines from Spanish rule.

On April 11, 1898, President McKinley sent a message to Congress saying that "in the name of humanity, in the name of civilization, in behalf of endangered American interests, the war in Cuba must stop." On April 19 Congress by a joint resolution declared that the people of Cuba "are, and of right ought to be, free and independent," demanding that Spain withdraw from the island, and authorized the President to use the land and naval forces of the United States to accomplish that result.

On April 21 this ultimatum was presented to Spain, diplomatic relations were severed, and the American fleet was ordered to blockade Havana. On April 25th, Congress formally declared that a state of war had existed since April 21.

Regiments of the Regular Army and National Guard were mobilized at Tampa, Mobile and other camps in the South, to later constitute the expeditionary force against Santiago de Cuba. Dewey's fleet was ordered from Hong Kong to destroy the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay. Admiral Cervera's Spanish fleet sailed from Cape Verde Islands for the West Indies about the same time, later to meet its doom at Santiago.

April was a month of decision and preparation and closed with the stage set for action. On May 1 Commodore Dewey's victory at Manila electrified the nation. On July 1 the assault on Santiago by Shafter's army began; on July 3 Cervera's fleet was destroyed while trying to escape from Santiago harbor, and on July 17 Santiago surrendered.

These are the high points in the brief but dramatic struggle which was ended by the protocol of August 13, followed by the treaty of Paris, whereby Spain acknowledged Cuba's freedom, ceded Porto Rico to the United States, and received $20,000,000 for the Philippines.

It was not a great war, but it had far-reaching consequences for many millions of people; consequences that were altogether in the interest of humanity and civilization.

MUSSOLINI'S RULE

In rescuing Italy from the chaotic condition in which it found itself immediately after the World war, Premier Mussolini performed a distinguised patriotic service. But by his increasing arrogance he may yet undo the good which resulted from his earlier efforts.

Lately he has not only ruled Italy with an iron hand, but he has shown a disposition to exert his tremendous energy in directions which seem to threaten international complications. Bitter complaints have been made concerning Italy's treatment of German residents of South Tyrol, brought under Italian jurisdiction as the result of the war. It is charged that these people have been required to take Italian names, and are forbidden to use their native tongue, sing their native songs, or inscribe the German names of their dead on tombstones. A protest from Austria, of which these people were former citizens, was violently denounced by Mussolini.

This is only one of a series of incidents which have caused apprehension for the peace of Southern Europe, where an outbreak might easily lead to a new European war. While Mussolini has exercised absolute control over all Italian domestic and foreign policies since his rise to power in 1922, there are grave doubts that he can maintain either national or international peace if he persists in his domineering attitude.

ABOUT DEAD-BEATS

Every person who has conducted a business in which the extending of credit is practiced must be impressed with the large number of people in the world who appear to be born dead-beats. There are a few in every community who make pretensions to business and social standing, yet were never known to pay a bill when it was due, and seldom pay one at all excepting as a result of hounding or legal action.

Morally there is no difference between one who fails to pay an honest debt when he can pay it and one who robs a till or cracks a safe. In fact, if there be any decency in either, it appears to be on the side of the common criminal, who at least does not abuse confidence and friendship. Credit bureaus are gradually making the path of the dead-beat a little more thorny, but he still flourishes to an extent that is a serious handicap to honest citizens.

AN APPEAL TO VANITY

Recently a score or more of Washington's social aspirants were induced to pay $100 each in order to be included in a "blue book" to contain the names of the capital's elite. For $200 additional the photograph of the subscriber was also inserted in the magic volume.

The promoter of this scheme for the glorifying of the socially ambitious was 65-year-old Joseh Rheinstrom, who lived in style at a leading hotel and called on his prospective customers in a luxurious limousine, after making appointments by telephone. Police investigated his activities, found that he had no connection with any social register, and put him in jail, charged with fraud. His dupes are naturally much embarrassed and are trying to keep their part in the affair quiet.

This is another illustration of the ease with which swindlers trap their victims through appeals to that vanity described by Browning as "an itch for the praise of fools."

CARELESS SMOKERS MENACE TO FORESTS

How long will a cigarette burn? Smokers may disagree on this burning question, but State Forester M. B. Pratt, who knows the menace of cigarettes, cigars and lighted matches in California's forests, can settle the dispute with scientific data.

Of the six most popular brands of cigarettes, for instance, the "longest smoke" burns steadily for 27.2 minutes and the quickest burning variety, 19.2 minutes.

Then, too, there are the "aristocrats" of the cigarette family, highly priced Turkish affairs, with a longevity ranging from 30.2 minutes to 33.5 minutes, according to information furnished the state forester by the United States Bureau of Standards.

At any rate, says Forester Pratt, any cigarette thrown down carelessly in grass, grain, brush or timber lands, or along state highways, burns altogether too long for safety's sake. Cigars also, are a menace, though they go "dead" after periods of from 2.82 minutes to 4.62 minutes, dependent on the brand.

"These tests," says Pratt, "are significant because they reveal just how great a hazard can be created by a single cigarette, or cigar, that is not stamped out before being discarded. And don't stamp them out in dry grass, please."

Father Time was the original nonstop flyer.

SIDELIGHTS

A Winnipeg newspaper records some recent happenings which indicate that there is something in a name, after all. Oscar Luck went bankrupt as a result of gambling; Mr. Cuff and Miss Link were married; Thomas Neverstop was jailed for speeding past traffic signals, and Alfred Waterer was fined for selling weakened milk.

In a minority report opposing a farm relief measure, Congressman Clarke of New York last week turned a neat alliteration, declaring that the bill would "hamper, hinder, humiliate, humble and hamstring" the law of supply and demand.

Miss Marie Hall, of Pittsburgh, has ambitions for fame, but does not choose a transatlantic flight as her medium for self-expression. She writes the police department at Niagara Falls: "Please tell me how I can go over the falls in a barrel. I am 32 years old and sure do want to go over the falls in a barrel."

Young people seeking a career might well consider the soap business. A few days ago employees of Proctor & Gamble Co., famed Cincinnati soap manufacturers, were given their annual profit sharing checks aggregating $700,501, distributed among about 10,000 workers.

Professor Todd of Western Reserve University declares that the age at which a mummy died can be told by an examination of the knee bones. It is doubtful that such a test would work out on the live ones we see on the streets.

A new publication has appeared in New York, and is having a large sale at one dollar a copy, according to C. O. McIntyre. It is a "Speakeasy Guide," listing more than 700 places with prices charged for the various drinks.

Warden N. L. Speer of the Texas state penitentiary resigned a few days ago, declaring that he does not believe in capital punishment. He came to that conclusion after executing twenty-seven men.

Sam Small of the Atlanta Constitution, himself a staunch Democrat, appears to be unimpressed with the political sagacity of his fellow Southerners. He refers to the South as "the backbone, the breastbone and the bonehead of the Democratic party."

GIRL AT SWITCHBOARD SAVES SHOCK VICTIM

Miss Alice Keith, a telephone operator at Randolph, Mass., is credited with saving the life of Herman Shaw of that place. Stricken by a shock, Shaw laid for hours on the floor of the apartment which he occupied alone. Finally he gained sufficient strength to reach the telephone and ask the operator for aid. She traced the call and then summoned help. Shaw was found unconscious on the floor, the telephone beside him, and was removed to the hospital in Brockton.

Now it is proposed to observe a national Grade Crossing Day. Very well, if they will keep the trains off the tracks that day.

MOTORISTS CHEATED

An amazing story of petty swindling is told by Chief Inspector V. Stovall, of the Texas agricultural department, whose force recently checked up a large number of gasoline stations in that state.

With automobiles equipped with "blind" tanks, five inspectors made purchases at various times from 112 filling stations, in each case buying five gallons. The gasoline was afterwards measured by the inspectors, the test showing that eighty-five out of the 112 filling stations had given short measure. In some cases the shortage was as much as a gallon and a half.

Further investigation showed that the dishonest dealers had pumps so arranged that when gasoline is being run from the pump to the car a part of it was returned to the underground storage tank. It is said that this trick can be easily worked with nine different types of gasoline pumps in use in Texas.

Whether this practice of giving the motorist short measure is of wide extent is problematical, but the Texas revelations indicate that the people of Texas have been victimized, and that means should be employed in that state to check up occasionally as a protection to the public. This does not apply that dealers in gasoline are less honest than other people, but inspections should be made as a protection to honest dealers, as well as a means of detecting the swindlers.

Ignorance of the law is no excuse, except when one happens to be a lawyer.

Naturally those slick fellows who are mixed up in the oil scandal are slippery witnesses.

METHODS CHANGE

IN the old days, the covered wagon or dobbin and the surrey furnished the transportation. Today, fast trains and ships, automobiles and air transport keep pace with the fast moving world. Times and methods change.

Business too has changed. Sales methods of even a decade ago could not compete in the business world of today. Modern salesmen use the telephone to keep in touch with the trade between trips and to sell customers located off the beaten path. Executives can no longer wait days or even hours for a reply to important questions. They rely on the telephone.

Speed, economy and dependability have made this personal means of communication with others nearby and in distant places, a valuable asset in any business.

"The only really objectionable thing about you, my dear, is your rotten sense of propriety. You need to be shocked out of it. And, believe me, I'll do my cousinly best for you in that regard! But I can't marry you, St. Croix. And it isn't only because of 'Meely'—it's hardly that at all. It's because you and I could never be mates. When you know me better, you'll realize that; you and I are overything the other can't stand! If I had to live with your standards, St. Croix, I'd feel as cramped as though I were in jail. And you'd have fits if you had to reckon with a free-lance like me who finds all sorts and conditions of people so interesting and likable that your taking 'classes' so solemnly, your respect for a bauble like a title, and all that, just seems to me awfully funny!"

"You don't really know me, Sylvia!" he pleaded. "With 'Meely' I was not my real (and better) self! I was of course a cad! But that was not my true self, Sylvia," he insisted. "If you'll give me a chance to prove myself—"

"St. Croix, shall I tell you how impossible it would be to me to marry you? Just as impossible as it would be for you to marry that poor Meely Schwenckton!"

St. Croix recoiled—for he knew when she said that that he was beaten.

It was the first time in all his life that he had been humiliated. And by a girl!

CHAPTER XI

Mr. Creighton, senior, after the first shock and embarrassment of discovering the identity of his wife's relative, Lady Sylvia St. Croix, with the teacher, Miss Schwenckton, whom he had ignominiously bribed to abandon his son when it was his dearest wish that she should marry him, regarded the episode with vast amusement; Mrs. Creighton and Sylvia liked each other on sight; Marvin accepted the confirmation of his suspicions with outward calm, but inward delirium; but St. Croix, almost as soon as he had delivered the girl over to his mother, had escaped from his own devastating situation by fleeing to Florida on the pretext of looking into his father's interests there.

As these interests were not so pressing as to necessitate his leaving home at this crucial time, his action could be interpreted by his family in only one way—Sylvia must have given him to understand quite unequivocally that he, the younger son, was not an acceptable substitute for his elder brother—even though the elder had long since flatly refused to so much as consider the question of marrying her.

Mr. Creighton could now only hope that the apprehensions he had suffered lest Marvin had fallen a prey to the charms of the teacher of William Penn school were indeed well founded.

The very morning after her arrival she asked "Cousin Creighton" to let her have a talk with him alone. Shut up with him in his study, the revelation she there made to him of her ambition and determination to exploit herself at Hollywood came to him as a blow.

"The only way you could stop me, Cousin Creighton," she answered his arguments against her plan, with sympathy in her tone for his manifest dejection, "would be to take back your money—what's left of it." She pushed toward him on the table between them a pile of bills—a pensive wistfulness in the lovely eyes she raised to his. "I can't go, of course, without your money."

"And if you can't go, what then? Will you," he asked hopefully, "then marry one of my sons?"

"If I said yes to that," she replied in alarm, drawing back the bills, "you'd take back your money! No, if I can't go with your money, I'll earn the money. And if you won't give me a job at mining, I warn you I'll turn evangelist! I've heard there's money in that. I'd make piles, for I'd be a new American sensation—an English titled woman prancing and ranting over your broad land as a Soul-Saver! I could do it, too!"

"Yes, and would, by G—d!" he exclaimed. "Keep the money, in heaven's name!"

"Thank you. Then that's settled."

"If you fail at Hollywood?" he gloomily inquired.

"Don't wish it on me—please! If I fail, I'll come back and marry any of your sons that want me. Only I draw the line at St. Croix. I couldn't," she shook her head, "marry St. Croix."

"Why?" asked Creighton testily, wounded in his paternal pride.

"First, because I'm not in love with him. Then I think a girl owes it to her children to pick out a good father for them—and St. Croix strikes me as too self-absorbed to make a successful husband and father. His own interests would always be first with him."

"St. Croix is a very fine young man!" his father warmly defended him. "Sensible and well balanced. No wild vagaries—"

"But I like rebels and vagabonds so much better than 'fine young men'!"

"Oh, then you mean," said Creighton, again picking up hope, "that you will marry Marvin if Hollywood disappoints you?"

"Not unless he asks me to."

"If he doesn't ask you to," exclaimed Mr. Creighton, "he's a—"

"Yes, isn't he! I think so too. But though I'd never marry a man that hadn't proposed to me, if I never got married, that question need not engage us, Cousin Creighton, because I'm not going to fail at Hollywood!"

* * * * * * *

It was a few days later that Marvin Creighton, one evening after dinner, standing in front of the library fire, looked down reflectively over his folded arms upon his radiant young cousin who reclined lazily and with a maddening grace on the big couch that stood before the fireplace.

"Is This a Proposal, Marvin?"

"It's incredible—utterly incredible!" he voiced his reflections.

"Yes, isn't it?—everything! But what in particular were you referring to?"

"That you—sitting there in front of me—you!—are the girl I said I wouldn't marry! Why didn't some one suggest that I cross to England and look you over first?"

"Probably because they were all too sensible to think you'd pay any attention to such a good suggestion. And if you had, you'd probably have found me flown from home to elude you."

"You see, you were offered to me," he explained, "like a mark-down at Woolworth's! Too cheap an article, it seemed to me, to take as a wife—seeing I did have a few dreams of fair women that were not so purchasable! And now, if I'm correctly informed as to 'the fury of a woman scorned,' there can't be the least hope for me—can there, Sylvia?"

"Is this a proposal, Marvin?"

"Well, I'm not sure it is. I'm not so conceited as to think my worth to you could measure up to the worth of a career for which you are highly talented! So I don't think I am proposing. I don't believe I intend to—if I have any influence with myself."

"Let's be engaged, Marvin, until I see how I make out at Hollywood. If I succeed, then no wedding bells for Meely and you'll have to jilt me again!"

"If only," he fetched a deep breath, "you hadn't that fatal talent! For we're mates, Sylvia, it's written in the heavens! I believe, you know, that you and I are mates in the real and lasting sense—for it's you I love, sweet child, not just your epidermis, lovely as it is—"

"My what?"

"I can think of you as old and wrinkled and I want and love you just the same—"

She warbled, "'Believe me if all those endearing—' But that's such old stuff—can't you tell me something a little more up to date?"

"Our sort of love, Sylvia, is so rare (or so it seems to me) that it's an awful pity, don't you think, to let it go by us even for the sake of a brilliant career?"

"Go by you, you mean?" she sweetly inquired; "for I didn't say I was in love with any one in particular."

"I said, didn't I, that we were mates? I'm your mate, too, if you only knew it—as much as you're mine!"

"When did you begin to feel that way?" she asked with a bright interest, her eyes shining up into his with rather a feverish excitement.

"From the first day I met you in your school! I couldn't keep off you! You had me—in the hollow of your hand!"

"Oh, gee, I didn't know it! And, Marvin! I've got to hold on to myself like anything or you'd have me in the hollow of your dear hand—and I don't want to be in any one's hands—not even in your strong and tender ones!—for I want to act!"

"I've seen you with those school children—I think your bigger career, Sylvia, lies in your having a brood of your own—I don't shock you, child, do I?"

"Well, yes, when you suggest a whole 'brood'! I think that's too many! I wish," sighed Sylvia, "I could have babies and a career, too. If I insisted on that, would you jilt me?"

"But, dear child, I can't live in California. Not even in New York. My work will always be here. And what kind of a marriage would that be—you in California and I in Pennsylvania?"

"You wouldn't give up your work for marriage; why should I? What is going to become of marriage when women's professions become as important and as inevitable to them as a man's is to him? I wonder!"

"Do you really think, Sylvia, that being a screen actress is as big a thing as rearing children?"

"It would depend, I should say, upon the sort of children you rear. I'd consider it an awful waste of life to bring up most of the people one knows!"

"But you and I, Sylvia," said Marvin solemnly, "might get some satisfaction from bringing up a family of—well, honest, fearless truth-seekers, prophets of a new gospel—"

"Oh, come, Marvin, let's give them a chance to be themselves!"

"That's what I want them to be! So few of us are ever ourselves! We're forced into a mold that's quite unlike our real selves! Let's rear a family that shall be a nucleus to start something—"

"But it's so dangerous, these days, to start anything—"

"Let them start the long-looked-for 'good-will to men' era. It's about due, if humanity is to survive, don't you think? Well, what do you say? Shall we?"

"This is the queerest proposal I ever had!"

"Well, I can't seem to do anything, even propose to a girl, according to pattern!"

"But you see, Marvin dear, love lasts such a short time. My career on the screen would last rather longer."

"Ours won't be the kind that doesn't last! It will be the kind that grows! It will—"

"Oh, you're young! You sound sixteen! I'm not so sure. But it does not really matter, does it?—whether it lasts or not? It's the supreme thing now!"

"You admit that?" he eagerly demanded.

"Oh, yes, Marvin! You've gone and dimmed the glory of the screen for me so that I don't feel half so enamored of it as I did—"

"I tell you, Sylvia!" He flung himself on the couch at her side. "You go on out to your old Hollywood, my dear, and try it out. For if you didn't give it a trial, you'd never be satisfied, never be sure you had not made a mistake—"

"I might even throw it up to you that you'd deprived the world of a great star—"

"That's what I want to avert. So you go on out there—and then when you decide to be mine, I'll have you fast!"

"I won't go a step unless you promise to come to see me over some weekend."

"It's three thousand miles across this continent, you know—or probably you don't know! You probably think California is a suburb of Philadelphia! You need to travel out to Hollywood to pick up some United States geography on the way."

"Now, Marvin," she feebly protested as he slipped a hard, strong arm about her and drew her close, "if you really make love to me, I'm lost!"

Deep Artesian Wells

Oxyacetylene-welded steel pipes 24 inches in diameter, having a wall five-eighths of an inch thick, will encase three artesian wells which have been sunk in widely separated sections of one of the large Texas cities to supplement its water supply.

Owing to the geological formation of the locality, the wells had to be drilled to a depth of 1,650 feet. The steel pipes which encase them are to extend downward 280 feet, and according to engineers all surface seepage will positively be eliminated.

This unusual and costly precautionary measure, says the New Jersey public utility information committee, is a striking illustration of the steps taken by water supply companies to safeguard the public against disease.

FIVE CLUBS HAVE A CHANCE TO WIN

McGraw Rates Giants With Four Others.

John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, regards the 1928 pennant race in the National league as "open." He gives his club an equal chance with four others to win the championship.

"Most decidedly five clubs have a chance to win the pennant in the National league this year," he said.

"We except to be in there fighting with the others, and I am very hopeful. The condition of our pitchers pleases me. Their stay at Hot Springs did them a great deal of good. They reported here with their wind good as a result of mountain climbing, and this is a most important item.

"Naturally the pitchers are ahead of the other members of the squad in development. The regulars have been coming along well enough, and before we leave Augusta the team will begin to take definite shape.

"Cohen will play second base. I am much encouraged by his early playing there. I think he will surprise a great many persons who thought he would not measure up to the mark. He is an earnest worker and highly intelligent. There is no reason why he should not be a high-class second baseman.

"Some of the younger pitchers have also developed rapidly and I am inclined to believe two or even three may be members of the first string.

"There is a possibility that I will carry seven outfielders, counting Ott as an outfielder, or six if we consider him an infielder. At this time he is both, and he can step into either the infield or outfield and give a good account of himself.

"I think nine pitchers will be enough and that probably will be the number retained."

Manager McGraw thinks the fight will be between the Giants, Pirates, Cardinals, Cubs and Reds. The first four finished the first division, although not in that order, last year. The Little Napoleon thinks well of Cincinnati, at the head of the second division in 1928.

Muldoon Is Against Holding in the Ring

William Muldoon, one of the three Solemn Solons of boxing in New York, while he has nothing against a holding company, is much set against holding in company, especially when that holding is in the ring. At the weekly meeting of the New York State Athletic commission Mr. Muldoon declared himself.

"There has been entirely too much holding in some recent so-called boxing bouts," thundered the dean of boxing solons, the while his colleagues on the commission nodded assent, "and we propose to have it stopped. Hereafter the referees will be warned to take note of this particular breach, and holding will count against the offender in the final reckoning that will be instrumental in rendering the decision."

Ruth Picks Yankees

Sizing up the contenders for the approaching big league campaign, Babe Ruth forecasts the Yankees and Cardinals in the world series next October. He figures Connie Mack's Athletics, with Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, finishing in second place in the American league scramble. He has the Pirates slated for second place in the National, and the Giants third.

Betty Nuthall Is Seen as Helen Wills' Rival

Betty Nuthall, "Beaming Betty" of the continental courts, will need her new over-hand service and an effective one if she is to cope with the power of Helen Wills' attack abroad this year.

The young English girl, finalist in the American championships last year against Miss Wills, is generally looked upon as the Californian's most interesting rival.

It will be one of the high spots of the court campaign when they meet at Wimbledon in June.

A QUEER ANIMAL

"I feel so very, very cross in the spring," said the Emu in the zoo.

"Are you cross now?" asked the Ostrich.

"I am," admitted the Emu.

"Too bad," said the Ostrich, "but you know I have troubles, too."

"Have you?" asked the Emu. "When I feel cross I like troubles, yes, plenty of them!

"Tell me yours."

"For years and years and years and years," said the Ostrich, "people have said that I hid my head under the sand when danger was near.

"Now that is not true. I lie low and my head is on the sand, but not under it.

"No, no, no!"

"How did such a story ever get around?" asked the Emu.

"I have no idea," said the Ostrich. "It does seem a pity, doesn't it?"

"Ah, yes," said the Emu. "It does seem a great pity. In fact everything seems a pity.

"It's a very sad world, especially in the springtime.

"So many people and creatures love the spring.

"Oh, how foolish are people and creatures."

"You've certainly got the 'blues,'" said the Ostrich.

"Blues!" shrieked the Emu. "I've not got the blues. Nor have I got one bit of blue about me.

"I'm brown, gray-brown, that's what I am."

"Oh dear," said the Ostrich, "they say I'm silly, but you are ever so much more so."

"I Don't Know What You Are Talking About."

"Perhaps," said the Emu, "but I don't know what you are talking about now."

"Wait and I will tell you," said the Ostrich.

"I'm waiting," said the Emu. "I've had no intention of moving on anyway.

"I have nothing else to do today."

"When I said that you had the 'blues,'" commenced the Ostrich, "I did not mean that you were blue in color, nor that had you had blue feathers.

"When creatpures have 'blues' it means that they are depressed and sad and mournful."

"Oh," said the Emu, "that's different. Then I have the 'blues.' Yes, I have."

"You're quite pleased about it, eh?" asked the Ostrich, grinning.

"I am," agreed the Emu.

"Well," said the Ostrich, "I'm not so sure that creatures are supposed to be pleased about having the 'blues.'

"They should be very sad they have them, I believe."

"Gracious," said the Emu, "it's enough to hate the spring and to feel cranky.

"Let me at least be pleased that I do feel that way."

"Quite the queerest animal in the world," said the Ostrich as he walked away.

"He actually enjoys being cross and 'blue.'

"Yes, certainly he is a queer animal—not only in appearance but in his ways."

She Got It All Right

A little girl was sent by her mother to the grocery store with a jug for a quart of vinegar.

"But, mamma," said the little one, "I can't say that word."

"But you must try," said the mother, "for I must have vinegar and there is no one else to send."

So the little girl went with the jug and as she reached the counter of the store, pulled the cork out of it with a pop, swung the jug on the counter and said:

"There, smell of that and give me a quart."

Music and Mechanics

When Junior had finished his first music lesson his teacher said to him, as she stopped the metronome which had been indicating tempos on top of the piano:

"Now, my boy, you must practice when you get home."

"And, teacher," asked the boy, "shall I tell father we must have a windshield cleaner for the piano?"

Correct

Teacher—Robert, here is an example in subtraction. Seven boys went down to the creek to bathe, but two of them had been told not to go in the water. Now can you inform me how many went in?

Robert—Yes ma'am; seven.

How Much Water Should Baby Get?

A Famous Authority's Rule

By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight-pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast-fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle-fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Just a word of caution. Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the genuine. The forty-cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.

Woman Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Denver, Colo.—"I have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and will take more. I am taking it as a tonic to help me through the Change of Life and I am telling many of my friends to take it as I found nothing before this to help me. I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not go down town because I was afraid of falling. My mother took the Vegetable Compound years ago with good results and now I am taking it during the Change of Life and recommend it."—Mrs. T. A. Miller, 1611 Adams Street, Denver, Colorado.

FISHERMAN FINED $100 FOR PLACING NETS

Three Pittsburg fishermen are each $100 poorer, but likely considerably wiser following their trial in the court of Judge R. P. Platt Jr., of Vacaville, for netting and possession of nets in fish and game district 2, where such practices are prohibited by law.

The three, Vincenzo Aiello, Neno Lucido and V. Mutule were nabbed by Fish and Game Division Deputies Charles Bouton and Charles England on February 12, after being advised by Constable J. M. Talbott of Montezuma, that they had placed nets in Montezuma Slough.

The doors are open one hours previous for the inspection of the zoo, and for the children to see the two mammoth beasts which require two specially constructed railway cars for their transportation."

STATE TRAFFIC OFFICER IS AWARDED MEDAL

For the first time in the history of the state traffic department of the Division of Motor Vehicles, a medal has been awarded to a state traffic officers for a conspicuous act of bravery.

The award was made to Thornton Edwards, Ventura county officer, who on the night of March 13, after his own home had been washed away, rode his motorcycle down the San Francisquito canyon to warn residents of the ill-fated district that the waters, loosed by the collapse of St Francis dam, were sweeping down upon them.

Like a modern Paul Revere, Edwards rode from home to home rousing the sleepers and urging them to escape before the 60-foot wall of water arrived. His own family had escaped to the hills.

The incident was brought to the attention of Frank G. Snook, chief of the division, who immediately ordered the preparation of a medal commemorating the event.

Snook announced the award would mark the innovation of a new policy by the division whereby acts of officers of an unusually meritorious nature will be suitably recognized in the future.
